What do you have to do before the departure?

- Every journey has to be arranged beforehand. You should find out the time of departure and arrival. You should pack your luggage and come to the railway station, coach station or airport in advance. You shouldn't forget your tickets, documents and money.

What do you have to do before the departure?

- To find the right platform, carriage and compartment, cabin or the right gate at the airport
- Check in for the flight or voyage
- Go through the Customs and passport control
- Fill in a declaration
- Take your heavy or bulky luggage to the luggage van
- Weigh your luggage and pay excess luggage charges if necessary
- Board the train/ship/plane on time

What really matters to me is...

- If you want to have an exciting unforgettable and amazing holiday, you should take into account(consideration) some important things.
- If the main idea of your holiday is relaxing and recharging yourself, you should just have the change of scene or activity.
- If you aim at gaining new information and receiving new knowledge, you'd rather plan your journey more thoroughly. You should keep in mind your interests and needs.

What really matters to me is...

- As for me it is quite enough to have a nice book or a magazine to let me while away the time...
- Personally I prefer a hearty talk with an interesting person (a fellow passenger, a room-mate ...)
- As far as I am concerned there is nothing like looking through the window and admiring the picturesque views.

Not to spoil the impression I'd like to avoid...

- Travel sickness( but you can take a medicine)
- Much luggage(but you can hire a porter/use a trolley)
- Missing my transport
- Delays and cancellations of trains, flights...
- Bad weather
- Annoying and irritating company

My priorities ...

- Vehicles(means of transport)
- Places to visit
- Accomodation
- Criteria for having a good rest
