

New Year in China

Chinese new year is the most important traditional holiday and the longest festival in China and other countries, who follow the Chinese Lunisolar calendar.

CHINESE NEW YEAR IS VERY ENTHUSIASTICALLY AND JOYFULLY CELEBRATED
AS THE SPRING
FESTIVAL FOR AS MUCH
AS 15 DAYS, IN ALL
ACROSS CHINA AND
MANY OTHER
COUNTRIES OF EAST
AND SOUTH-EAST ASIA.

AND SOUTH-EAST ASIA.

According to the Gregorian calendar, the lunar Chinese new year usually occurs in between the dates January 21 and February 20, every year. In the year 2012 Chinese new year will occur on January 23, and will be the year of the Dragon. Chinese new year celebrations are made with great enthusiasm, festivity, optimism, and joy

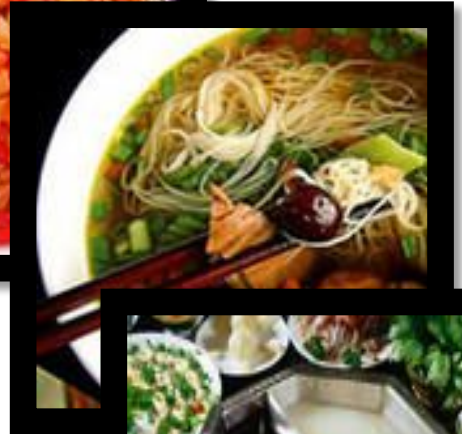

Chinese New Year 2012 Celebrations

The first day of the Chinese new year celebrations is traditionally and commonly occupied by visits to get blessings of senior and veteran members of the Chinese families

The yearly sumptuous and generous supper or reunion dinner enjoyed collectively with all near and dear families on the New Year's Eve, is another very significant event for Chinese New Year celebrations

This feast essentially includes traditional food items of fish and chicken, besides some sweet delicacies.

Chinese New Year is the biggest happy festival of the year for all people following the Chinese calendar, and therefore, it is celebrated with elaborate preparations and decorations, and with great festive and euphoric fervors

Chinese New Year Cards

Chinese new year cards are the most popular and in demand items during the new years. Commonly, the Chinese new year cards symbolize Chinese characters, symbols and food and the most popular among the Chinese symbols is the dragon

Reach out to your loved one with special Chinese new year cards on this new year.

HAPPY
CHINESE
NEW YEAR