An aerial photograph of Novosibirsk, Russia, showing a dense urban landscape. In the foreground, a wide, multi-lane highway with several lanes in each direction runs diagonally across the frame. The city is filled with various buildings, including modern high-rises and older residential blocks. A prominent feature is a large, modern building with a distinctive, curved, metallic facade. The city extends to the horizon under a clear blue sky. The text "Novosibirsk is the third-largest city in Russia" is overlaid in a pink, sans-serif font on the left side of the image.

Novosibirsk is

Arguments Against:

1. Large modern cities are too big to control.
2. Trains are packed; streets are crowded; busses are full.
3. There is always noise and traffic, everywhere.
4. Rents are high; buying a house of your own for average people is impossible.
5. The cost of living is higher in big cities.
6. Cities breed crime and violence; houses are often burgled; bicycles and motorcycles are stolen.
7. Tension in big cities shortens people's lives.
8. Pollution in big cities is dangerous to your health.
9. Contagious diseases become a serious health hazard.
10. Noise from neighbors make quiet living impossible.
11. Children have too many distractions from their studies.
12. Too many bad temptations present potential trouble for young people.

Problem:

The cities are not safety, but people want to live there.
