Traditional Periodisation of English Languages History

The commonly accepted, traditional periodisation divides English language history into three periods:

- ❑ Old English (OE);
- ❑ Middle English (ME);
- ❑ New or Modern English (NE, Mod E).

Professor Rastorguyeva's Periodisation

- This periodisation of English language history is partly based on the conventional three periods.
- It subdivides the history of the English language into seven periods.

Traditional Periodisation of English Languages History

The name of the period	Time (Chronology)
1. Old English (OE): 1.1 Early OE 1.2 Anglo-Saxon	1.1 5 th c.– 7 th c. 1.2 7 th c.– 11 th c.
2. Middle English (ME): 2.1 Early ME 2.2 Classical ME	2.1 11 th c.– 14 th c. 2.2 14 th c. – 15 th c.
3. New English (NE): 3.1 Early NE 3.2 The age of normalization and correctness 3.3 Late NE (Modern English)	3.1 15 th c. - mid.17 th c. 3.2 mid.17 th c. - 18 th c. 3.3 the end of the 18 th c.- till nowadays

English language development started with the West Germanic (WG) Invasion by the Angles,
the Saxons, the Jutes and the Frisians
in the 5th century (449 A.D.).

Old English

- ❑ At the beginning it was the stage of tribal dialects of the WG invaders, which were gradually losing contacts with the related continental languages.
- ❑ The tribal dialects were only used for oral communication.
- ❑ The 7th century is the beginning of writing, the tribal dialects gradually changed into local or regional dialects.

Old English

OE was a typical OG language, with a purely Germanic vocabulary, and few foreign borrowings. As far as grammar is concerned, OE was an inflected or “synthetic” language with a well-developed system of morphological categories.

Middle English Period starts with the Norman Conquest in 1066

Early Middle English

Historic Events	Linguistic Peculiarities
<ul style="list-style-type: none">1066, the year of the Norman Conquest	<ul style="list-style-type: none">A time of great linguistic changes at all the levels of the language
<ul style="list-style-type: none">Official language in England was French for 300 years	<ul style="list-style-type: none">English absorbed two layers of lexical borrowings: the Scandinavian element in the North-Eastern area (due to the Scandinavian invasions since the 8th c.) and the French element in the South-East (due to the Norman Conquest).
<ul style="list-style-type: none">Feudal system and foreign influences caused the greatest dialectal divergence	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Grammatical changes were so drastic that by the end of the period they transformed English into a mainly analytical one.

Classical Middle English

- The time of the restoration of English to the position of the state and literary language and the time of literary flourishing.
- The main dialect used in writing and literature was the mixed dialect of London, which arose in the 14th c.

New English period starts with the introduction of printing in 1475 by William Caxton.

Early New English

- ❑ A time of progress in culture, education and literature.
- ❑ The formation of the national English language.
- ❑ A time of sweeping changes at all levels.
- ❑ The period of variety and free choice in pronunciation, vocabulary and grammar.

The Age of Normalisation and Correctness

- ❑ Establishment of “norms”, which were fixed as rules in the numerous dictionaries and grammar-books published at the time.
- ❑ The 18th c. literary English differentiated into distinct styles.
- ❑ “Fixing the pronunciation”, and normalisation and restriction of word usage and grammatical construction.

Modern English

- By the 19th c. English had achieved the relative stability and had acquired all the properties of a national language, with its recognised standards.
- The expansion of English overseas proceeded together with the growth of the British Empire in the 19th c.

Modern English

The 20th c. witnessed considerable intermixture of dialects. The local dialects are being displaced by Standard English. The “best” form of English, the Received Standard, is being spread through new channels: the press, radio, cinema and television.

The last 30 or 40 years
can be singled out as the final stage of development, representing Present-day English.
