Who gets what from a litre of oil in 2014?

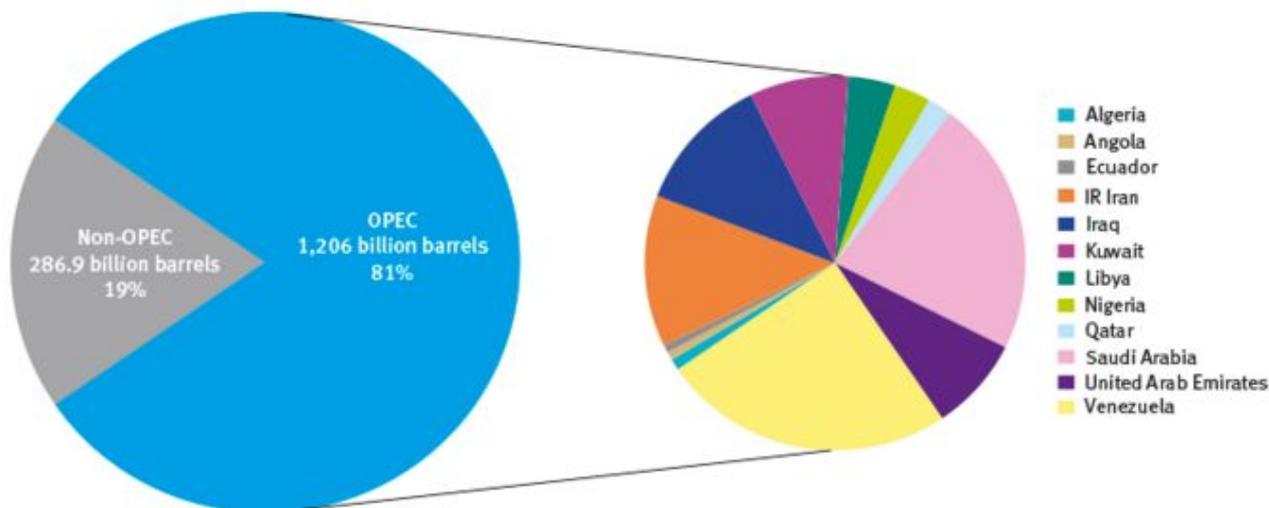

The graph above illustrates the inter-country variations in the average price of one litre of oil across G7 countries as well as the OECD average during 2014. It is important to note that these price variations are mainly due to the widely varying levels of taxes (highlighted in red) imposed by major oil consuming nations. These can range from relatively modest levels - like in the USA - to very high levels in Europe and the Asia/Pacific.

For example, in the UK the government in 2014 earned about 60.1% of the price charged for every litre of pump fuel sold to consumers. On the other hand, oil producing countries (including OPEC) earned about 29.7% of the total pump fuel price.

According to current estimates, more than 80% of the world's proven oil reserves are located in OPEC Member Countries, with the bulk of OPEC oil reserves in the Middle East, amounting to around 66% of the OPEC total.

OPEC Member Countries have made significant additions to their oil reserves in recent years, for example, by adopting best practices in the industry, realizing intensive explorations and enhanced recoveries. As a result, OPEC's proven oil reserves currently stand at 1,206.00 billion barrels.

The OPEC Secretariat produces numerous publications to inform the public about the Organization's activities, and to disseminate data and information about OPEC Member Countries and the oil industry in general.

The Monthly Oil Market Report analyzes the most important issues facing the world oil market. Along with supply and demand analysis, it provides an assessment of oil price movements and commodity markets, product markets and refinery operations, stock movements and tanker market activity.

The OPEC Bulletin is the Organization's monthly flagship publication. It contains feature articles about the Secretariat's activities and events, as well as about Member Country news.

The World Oil Outlook, WOO, offers OPEC's medium- to long-term outlook for the global oil market. Using different scenarios and analytical models, it brings together the many factors and issues that may affect the oil industry and OPEC Member Countries in the coming years.

The Annual Statistical Bulletin, ASB, collects statistical data from all Member Countries and provides detailed charts, graphs and tables showing quantitative information about oil and gas reserves around the world, and in OPEC Member Countries, as well as information regarding refining and consumption, exports and imports, pipelines and tankers, and product output.

Other publications include the Annual Report, the quarterly OPEC Energy Review handled by Willey Blackwell and contains academic essays on energy economics and oil-related issues, and the Long-Term Strategy, which is prepared every five years.
