

THE MOON IS SHRINKING AND SHAKING, NASA SAYS

Our neighbour has shrivelled up like a raisin

Over the last decade, scientists have established that as the inside of the Moon cooled, it shrivelled up a like a raisin. That left it riven with cliffs called "thrust faults", marked all over its surface.

One of thousands of the faults found on the Moon by Nasa's Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter

