

WORLD CUP

The world championship on football, also often called the FIFA world Cup, world Cup, FIFA world Cup, FIFA world Cup is important international football competition. The soccer world Cup is the governing body of world football — FIFA, and can participate in the men's national teams of member countries of FIFA all over the world.

- The final tournaments of the world Championships are held every 4 years, like Olympic games, however, if we consider the regional qualifiers, every world Cup continues for more than 3 years. In the qualifying rounds of the 2010 world Cup involved 204 of the team. In the final tournament, which takes place every 4 years for about a month in advance, selected the host country of the championship, since 1998 take part 32 teams (31 teams, became eligible at the end of the qualifying tournament, and the team of the host country (since 1938); theoretically, the tournament can take more than one country, however, more than 85-year history, only once FIFA has entrusted the staging of the world Cup to two countries. Subsequently, the organization has repeatedly signaled that it is not aimed at holding the tournament in two or more countries (unlike, for example, from UEFA since UEFA EURO 2000, has repeatedly entrusted the European Championships in multiple countries). From 1938 until 2002 the winner of the previous season's world championship also participated in the final tournament without qualification; since 2006, the winner of the previous world championship is a qualifying tournament on a common basis).

- The final of the world Cup, held since 1930 (with a break in 1942 and 1946 due to world war II), has a huge audience and attracts great interest worldwide. For example, the finals of the 2006 looked 715.1 million viewers, which is the ninth broadcast in the number of views

- Last world Cup was held from 12 June to 13 July 2014 in Brazil. The reigning world champion — the national team of Germany. The next championship of 2018 will pass in Russia, and the championship 2022 will be held in Qatar.

- and the whole history of the world Championships, only 8 countries have won the title of Champions. The greatest number of titles on account of Brazil — 5 times they became winners of the championship. Italy and Germany have won the world Cup 4 times; Argentina, Uruguay became Champions twice, and once the championship was won by England, France and Spain.
