

My future profession

I won't have a profession.

That is all.

Sooner or later everybody has to think about his or her future profession. But when you are just sixteen, it's so difficult to make the right decision, and so easy to make a mistake! Of course, some people from the very childhood know for sure what they want to be. For example, my best friend has always known that she will be a doctor. She attends special courses for enhanced studying of biology and chemistry, and she believes in her success.

As for me, I don't know exactly what I want. I like a lot of things, and I do well in most subjects. And many professions appear interesting to me.

At first I thought about pursuing a legal career. Lawyers can work in different professional spheres. For example, I could become a barrister, a notary, a legal counsel, or even an investigator. Good lawyers are in demand everywhere: in private companies and large corporations, in government agencies, in educational institutions, and law-enforcement bodies.

But I've always had a special interest in advertising. (okay it from my mom)so I've already decided what I want to do when I grow up. I want to have a job where I can apply my creative skills. I would like to work as a creative Director in an advertising Agency.

If you want to be a good art director, you need to be creative. The way advertisement motivates people to do something what they actually didn't plan to do is fascinating. I also strongly believe that work of creative director can be compared with art. A good advertisement is really an art object.

I strongly believe that if I am persistent and ambitious, everything becomes possible. However, I`m absolutely convinced that without good grades at school the success in one`s future career is out of the question.

THE END.

And work me all life .
