

Rules of survival

In the afternoon you are in cover.

If there is no dark place, shade 2 ropes on the objects on top of them, put a rag on them.

Beware of dangerous and poisonous animals.
Before you find water under the rocks, poke or inspect the stones, in the case of animals.

A hand is shown reaching out from the sand in a vast, arid desert landscape. The sand is golden-brown and shows ripples from the wind. In the background, there are rolling sand dunes under a clear blue sky. A white text box with a green border is overlaid on the image, containing a warning message.

Beware of dangerous and poisonous animals.
Before you find water under the rocks, poke
or inspect the stones, in the case of animals.

Beware of dangerous and poisonous animals.
Before you find water under the rocks, poke
or inspect the stones, in the case of animals.

Try to move around at night.

In the desert it is better not to move around during the day.

At night, you can go further and avoid a heat stroke.

Breathe in if it's hard or hard for you.
Put a wet gauze or cloth on your head.
Loosen or take off your clothes.

If you do not follow
these rules, you die in agony or you are eaten and torn off
your head.
Good luck!