

An aerial photograph of Berlin, Germany, taken during the day under a blue sky with scattered white clouds. The Spire of Television (Fernsehturm) is the most prominent landmark, a tall, slender tower with a spherical observation deck. To the left, the Spandau Palace (Schloss Spandau) is visible, featuring a large green dome. The Spree river flows through the city, with a small boat on the water. The foreground shows a busy multi-lane road with many cars, and various residential and commercial buildings with red-tiled roofs. The word "Berlin" is overlaid in large, bold, yellow letters in the center of the image.
