

You have been growing up!

You are not kids anymore.

In some years you will become the graduates of English Club!

Miss Stacey will always remember and love you!

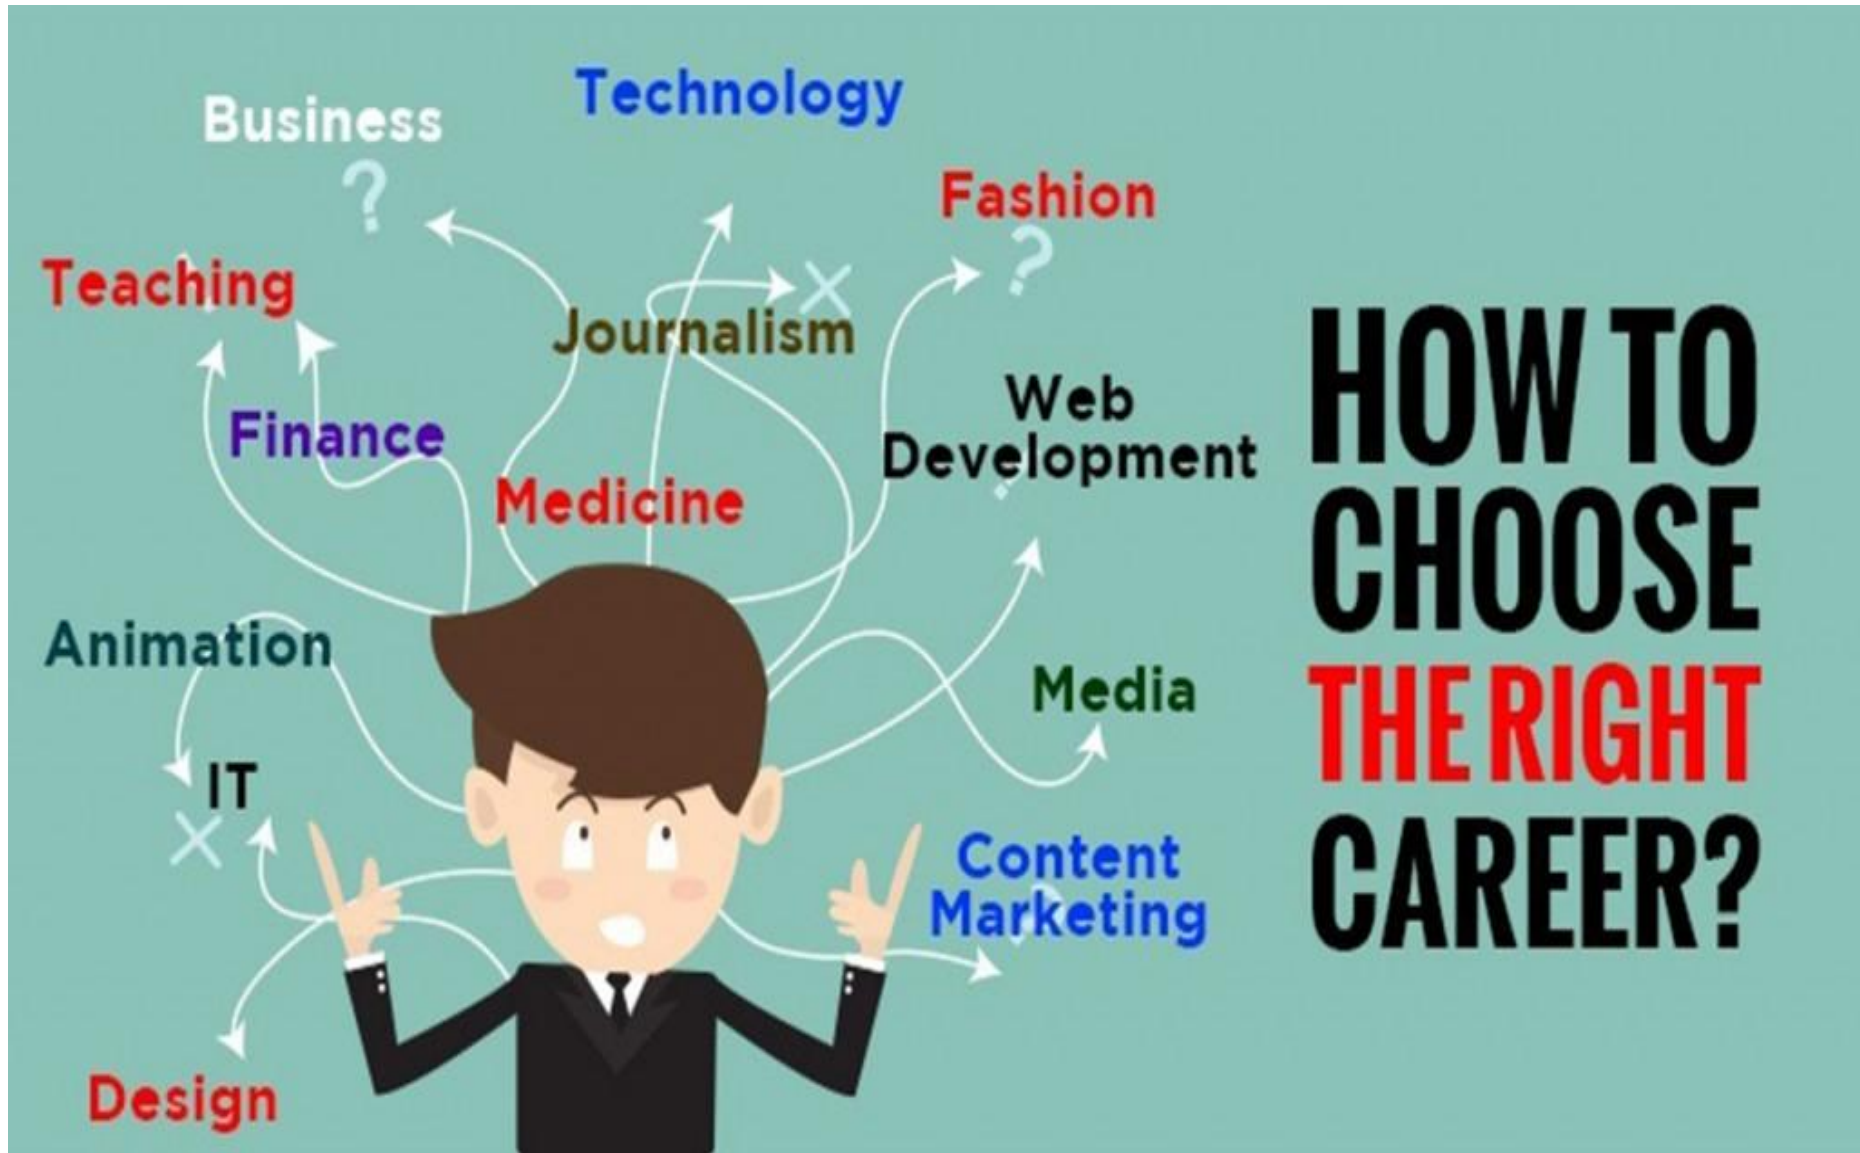

I am sincerely glad that you will start your grown-up life.
The next question. What to do for a living in future?

How to choose a profession

The problem is that we don't know very well what exactly this job needs.

Lilly Hi, Ella. You've cut your hair, it looks great!

Ella Yes, I have. I've put a few red and blond highlights in it too. And, you've changed your hairstyle!

Lilly Yeah, I did it last week. Do you like it?

Ella It's fantastic.

Lilly A new school year, a new look! Did you have a good summer?

Ella Yeah, it was great.

Lilly Have you finished your project?

Ella No, I haven't. Have you done it?

Lilly I've nearly finished. I've got it on the memory stick with me. Maybe we can go to the computer room at lunch time. Have they finished the new computer room?

Ella No, they haven't. The keyboards haven't arrived. We'll have to find an empty classroom.

Lilly Hey, have you seen Danny Taylor?

Ella No, why?

Lilly He looks really different. He's lost weight, and he's cut his hair, a lot!

Ella A lot? Has he shaved his head?

Emphasising contrasting alternatives

C52

When we present alternatives, we 'underline' the contrast between them. Listen to this example. Notice the way the speaker 'underlines' the alternatives.

52. C 52.mp3

A: I'd like a hamburger, please.

B: Do you want a super burger or a regular burger?

A: What's the difference?

B: Well, the super comes with chips and the regular comes without chips.

C53

The same sentence can be pronounced differently, depending on the sentence that came before it. Listen to these examples. Notice how B 'underlines' in a different place depending on what A said.

A: You can pay by credit card.

B: I haven't got a credit card.

A: Why are you paying in cash?

B: I haven't got a credit card.

A: Shall we sit inside or outside?

B: Let's sit outside.

A: Where shall we sit?

B: Let's sit outside.

53. C 53.mp3

Note: In the second example above, it is not a different word which is underlined; it is a different part of the same word outside.

The word we choose to 'underline' can change the meaning of our sentence. Listen to these sentences pronounced in two different ways and see the different meanings in the pictures.

Do you want the hamburger with chips, or salad?

55. C 55.mp3

Read the short conversations. Which words do you think B will 'underline'? Underline them in the texts below. Then listen and check.

1 A: I'd like a salad, please.

B: A mixed salad or a Greek salad?

A: What's the difference?

B: Well, a mixed salad has tuna and a Greek salad has cheese.

2 A: I'd like to stay two nights, please.

B: Do you want full board or half board?

A: What's the difference?

B: Full board includes all meals and half board includes just breakfast and dinner.

3 A: We'd like a room for two, please.

B: Would you like a standard or deluxe?

A: What's the difference?

B: Standard has a mountain view and deluxe has a sea view.

Follow up: Play the recording again and repeat B's lines.
