

GREENPEACE

PARÍS CLIMATE DEAL
WELCOMED, BUT CRITICS
WARN OF CHALLENGES AHEAD.

<http://www.euronews.com/2015/12/13/paris-climate-deal-welcomed-but-critics-warn-of-challenges-ahead/>

The reaction overall to the Paris climate deal has been positive, in particular from the summit delegates. They claim it heralds the beginning of a historic transformation of the world's fossil fuel driven economy.

However, there have been some reservations over the timescales of targets set out in the landmark agreement.

This agreement is a good starting point. There could have been no agreement, a total disaster. However, the long-term objectives are not clear enough. The aim is to be below 2 degrees and reach 1.5 degrees Celsius. It fails to deal with the issue of climate change. We haven't saved the planet or humanity of climate change. It has set a new starting point with a new goal."

The deal marks the beginning of huge investment in technology and renewable energy that could spark a new era in global economic growth, according the one report from Barclays bank.

