

Friendship

in our life

‘A true friend is one soul
in two bodies.’

Aristotle

A friend can always share your joys and sorrows.

joys

X2 more enjoyable

A friend can always share
your joys and sorrows.

sorrows

X2 less unpleasant

Making friends

- ❑ isn't a fast process
- ❑ requires much time
- ❑ requires different life situations

Different life situations

show how people
relate to each other

Different life situations

show whether people

help to solve problems,

support,

enjoy achievements
together.

‘to eat a peck of salt’

spend a lot
of time together

friends

know each
other very well

Most people need
friendship as an integral part of happiness.

For what?

the main reason
why we need friends

Our individual possibilities are limited.

Sometimes we need help
from trustworthy people.

Friends can

share our feelings

help cope
with problems

GIVING SUPPORT

is the most valuable

People naturally feel happy
when they can help someone.

If you have friends, you have lots of possibilities to give them a part of your time

strengths

feelings

Giving something is more valuable

than receiving.

As for me, I have a small circle of good friends.

- ❖ are always by my side
- ❖ make my life complete

Hard times will always reveal true friends.

My friends will never

- turn their back on me
- envy my success

I am lucky to have
a loyal friend.

He is open,
sociable, and
sympathetic.

I am lucky to have
a loyal friend.

He is fond of cars and likes to arrange parties.

- ❖ have known each other > 10 years
- ❖ have a lot to talk about

Some people wonder
how we became friends
because we have completely different characters.

The secret

He likes to share
his thoughts.

I'm always ready
to listen to him.

When we meet

We always have fun together and can rely on each other.

I can't say that I have many friends,

but these few people
mean a lot to me

and I will always try my best to be a faithful friend to them.
