

Red square and the Kremlin

The Kremlin symbolizes the power of Russia and is also an important historical architectural structure. Red Square is one of the most important sights of the country. The mysteries of the buildings have not yet been solved by scientists.

The Central place on the square is occupied by the mausoleum, where the body of Lenin is located, it is here that tourists most often go. But when visiting the mausoleum, there are a number of restrictions: you can not go into it with bags, backpacks and packages. You can not go here even with a mobile phone, which has a video camera.

---

On the South side of the square is the Church of the Intercession Of the mother of God. Among the people, this building has a second name-St. Basil's Cathedral. Nine churches of different colors on one Foundation are the hallmark of the capital of Russia.

---

Near the Cathedral is a monument to Minin and Pozharsky. The monument was opened in 1818.

Opposite the Kremlin wall stretches the facade of Gum. The store also has the status of an architectural monument.

Red square is a truly historic place where all the important events related to the history of our country took place. And this is what determines the interest of tourists to it.
