

WELCOME TO THE ONLY CREATION OF HUMAN HANDS IN CHINA

The construction of the wall took 2,000 years. The first parts were built in the 8th century BC. For a long time, the wall remained unknown to the rest of the world. The first European to set foot on it in 1605 is the Portuguese Bento de Gois.

The wall is also known as "the world's longest cemetery" as hundreds of thousands of people died during construction.

Many legends with this building

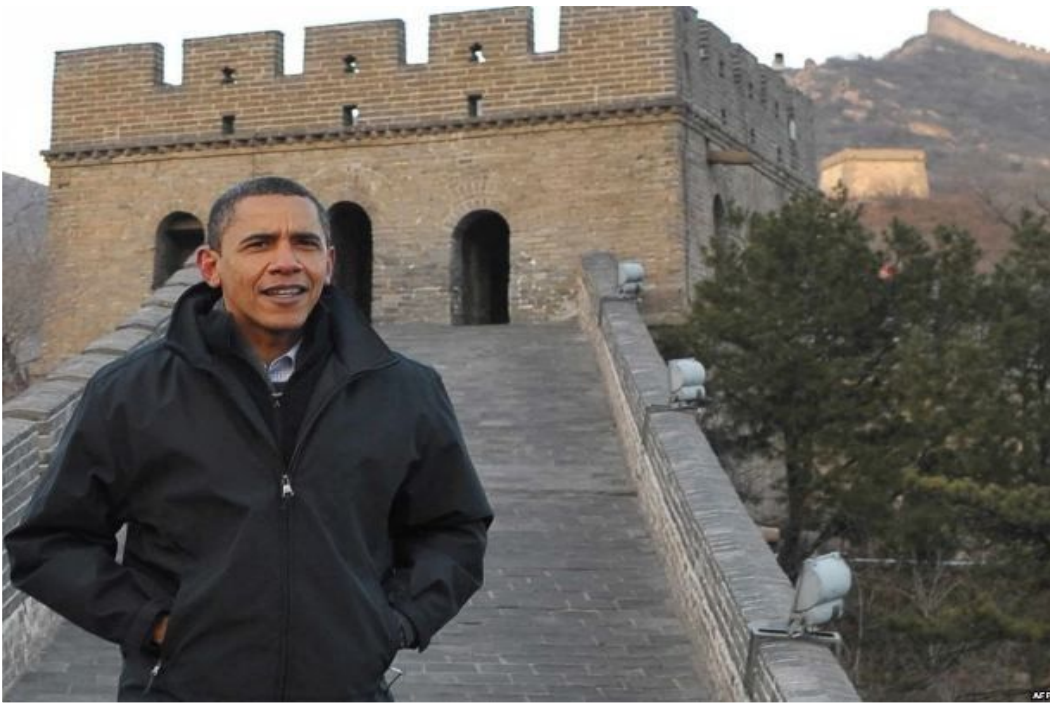

- ▶ There are many legends and myths associated with this building. The most famous tells of the wife of a farmer who was forced to work at a construction site. When she heard that her husband died while working, she wept so bitterly at the wall that it collapsed, exposing his bones. And the woman was able to bury them. There is even a monument commemorating this event.

In 1987, the Great Wall of China entered the list of great national and historical sites of the world by UNESCO.

A huge number of famous people and politicians visited the wall. Among them are US Presidents George W. Bush, Ronald Reagan, Richard Nixon and Barack Obama.

The Best Times to Visit: Spring and Fall
The best times to visit the Great Wall are spring and autumn to avoid summer heat and crowds, and winter freezing conditions.

It is the country's most popular and visited tourist center with tens of millions of visitors a year

It is less known to tourists, but its scenery rivals any part of the Great Wall. Surrounded by dense forests, the Great Wall of China will not only teach you a wonderful lesson in Chinese history, but also bring you closer to nature. Decorated with blooming flowers in spring and summer, golden leaves in autumn, and covered in snow in winter, the majesty of the Great Wall is to be experienced at any time of the year.
